Before noon another crowd even greater than that which had preceded it in the early morning had gathered on the sidewalks. The Western Zouaves, of Elizabeth, N. J., some District of Columbia militia and guards, and army posts were among the crowd, and while they waited a band serenaded the Prosident. Soon after noon the doors were reopened and the reception was renewed.

The Secretary then proceeded to the Treasury Department and the oath of office was administered to him by Mr. Fitzpatrick, a clerk in the department in the presadministered to him by Mr. Fitzpatrick, a clerk in the department, in the presence of Ex-Secretary Fairchild and some of the officials. After a few minutes conversation between the new and old Secretaries, Ex-Secretary Fairchild presented to Secretary Windom the heads of divisions and other officials of the department. At 2 o'clock this afternoon Mr. Biaine came to the Department of Mr. Blaine came to the Department of State. A curious crowd filled the hallway before the door of the Secretary's room.

Sceretary Bayard cordially received Mr. Blaine, and they exchanged courte-ous remarks for a time, while waiting for the arrival of Justice Miller. The interval was a little tedious and Mr. Blaine walked about the rooms, looking at the pictures and opening a note accompanying a bouquet of cut flowers. Assistant Secretary Moore and the few division children were companying a bouquet of cut flowers.
Assistant Secretary Moore and the few

At ten minutes before 3 o'clock Mr. Wanamaker, escorted by Gen. Stevenson, the First Assistant Postmaster General, and two or there friends, arrived at the Postofice Department. The party was conducted to the rooms until to-day occupied by General Dickinson, where the prescribed oath was administered by Judge Lawrence. Prescribed oath was administered by Judge Lawrenson, one of the oldest em-ployes of the Government, who has now sworn into office 25 Postmaster Generals. The chief officials of the department were then introduced to Mr. Wanama-ker.

At about the same time Judge Noble At about the same time Judge Robie reached the liver of positive as soon joined by Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court. The assistant secretaries, the chiefs of the several bureaus of the departments and other officials were introduced by General Vilas. Justice Miller then administered the cath, after which those present offered their congratulations.

The newly qualified Cabinet officers had little opportunity to attend to official business this afternoon, as they were engaged in receiving a continuous line of calers, mostly people from their own States, who called to offer their congratulations. Secretary Blaine remained at the Department of State until the close of office hours to receive a number of Montana people, who called by appointment, and a few other persons. None of the new officers undertook the routine duties of their departments today, and the Assistant Secretaries kept the wheels of executive business in motion.

day, and the Assistant Secretaries kept the wheels of executive business in motion.

Assistant Secretary Thompson had a special interview with Secretary Windom this afternoon and placed their resignations at his disposal. They informed him of their willingness to assist him in the performance of his official duties until he completes the organization of the department in accordance with his own wishes, and therefore they would continue at their desks until their successors were selected. Mr. Windom replied that he appreciated their kindness and would not actupon their resignations until he had conferred with the President on the subject. Solicitor General Jonka has tendered his resignation to the President, to take effect at his convenience, Attorney General Miller to-day requested Mr. Jenks to remain for a few days, until he becomes a little more familiar with the business of the department and he consented to do so.

GOVERNOR GOFF'S CLAIMS. An Eastern Paper's Comments on the Sit tion at Charleston.

BALTIMORE, MD., March 6.—The Amercan says: The political situation in West Virginia is a strange one. We so adjusted as not to encourage similar conditions in future. There is no troversy in Rhode Island. The essential weakness of Dorr's position was that he was not supported either by the letter or the spirit of the law, and the action of himself and his followers was sheer rebellion. In West Virginia there can be no doubt of the substantial justice of Goff's claim to the substantial justice of Goff's claim to the Governorship. Had it not been evident that he was elected by a majority of the suffrages of the people, a partisan Legislature would not have refused to perform its constitutional obligation and declare the vote. The object of not doing so was to deprive Goff of his constitutional right to the office and retain a Democrat. But a Democrat is clearly precluded by the Constitution from holding over, and Carr, the President of the Senate, by the same instrument asserts a right to succeed to the vacant office.

As lar as we are unit to unrayer the tangle, Wilson has no right to the office whatever, Carr's claims depend upon a contingency not contemplated and not provided for by the Constitution; and, upon the principle that no party can take advantage of its own wrong, and that what the Constitution expressly declares shall be done, must be presumed to have been done by the Legislature. declares shall be done, must be presumed to have been done by the Legislature, Mr. Goff is in fact Governor of West Virginia. To decide otherwise would be to admit the right of the Legislature to constitute itself a body entirely independent of and above the will of the people and the Constitution that creates it, responsible to none for its action except its own partisan and dishonest whims. its own partisan and dishonest whims, and able at any time to precipitate a state of anarchy and confusion that, if persisted in, must sound the death knell of Republican institutions and popular

There are good grounds, however, for believing that the conservative public sentiment of West Virginia will force a peaceful and just settlement of the trouble, and one that will put an end to the legislative usurpation in the future.

Her bronchial affliction, however, became chronic; the disease caused heart trouble, which rapidly grew worse, until it resulted in her death. The funeral services will be held at her late residence on Friday morning next, at 10 o'clock. The body will be interred at Cypress Hills in the family plot. The life of Miss Booth has been cone of toil, yet one of great beauty and crowned with success. She was born in Yapbank, Long Island, on April 19, 1831. Her father, William Chatfield Booth, a descendant of John Booth, who came to this country in 1649, established the first public school in Brook-lyn. Mary Booth's mother was a grand-daughter of an exile of the French revolution.

When but a mere child Mary Booth displayed great literary tendencies. At seventeen years she was an eager Latin scholar, and had read many of the great historians. Her tastes inclined naturally toward the study of languages and natural sciences, and in these directions she worked earnestly. Before she reached the age of twenty years she began the work of translation, which was one of the most important of her life. Among her earliest translations were Mery's "Andre Chenier," Victor Cousin's "Life and Times of Mme. DeCheyrez," Mannier's "Russian Tales" and Edmund About's "Germaine and King of the Mountains." She was at this time contributing liberally to the newspapers and magazines and collecting material for the most elaborate work of her life, "A Complete History of the City of New York." The first edition of this work appeared in 1859. The reception of the book everywhere was cordial, Second and third editions were printed, enlarged and illustrated. The last edition, brought down to date, was printed in 1880.

The work which gave Mary Booth the The work which gave Mary Booth the greatest national reputation was done during the civil war. Just after Sumpter's gun had set forth its ultimatum she received an advance copy of the Count De Gesparin's famous "Uprising of a Great People." She took it at once to Mr. Scribner and urged him to publish a translation, but he told her the war would be over before it could be brought out. Finally he said if the manuscript could be ready in a week, he would publish it. By writing almost twenty-four hours a day, only stopping for food, she hours a day, only stopping for food, she completed her task. The work was read from one end of the country to the other, and created the greatest enthusiasm.

persisted in, must sound the dependence of Republican institutions and popular government.

Such an interpretation is clearly inadmissible upon prudential grounds. The whole country is interested in the decision of the matter, because vicious political precedents too often prove attractive to parties in the heat of excitement, and nothing could be so damaging to honest and stable government all over the Union as to allow the recent action of the West Virginia Legislature to go unrebuked and even rewarded by substantial political advantages.

It is eminently proper that the resources of the state tribunals should be exhausted before any appeal is made to be borne in mind that the national government is especially directed by the constitution to see that each State is provided with a republican form of government.
